Dr. Jill Cirasella
The Graduate Center

“Fake Journals and Conferences: What to Know about the Faux.”

Abstract:

As a researcher, you are eager to publish your work in journals and present at conferences. But don't let your eagerness allow you to be fooled by fake (often called "predatory") journals or conferences. These low-quality outlets exist for the sole purpose of profit, not for the dissemination of peer-reviewed research. Indeed, they frequently lie about their peer review practices and engage in other forms of deceit. Come to learn how to spot these bad actors, and how to critically evaluate any journal or conference before submitting a paper or proposal.