Achieve mastery of the languages, literatures, and civilization of the Greco-Roman world, and conduct original research for presentation at international conferences.

Work with top faculty to prepare for academic careers at both the college and secondary levels.

Specialize in Classical Philology or Ancient History

Enroll in a broad range of courses, ranging from master’s-level surveys and composition courses to research seminars at the Ph.D. level, offered by a consortium of NYC institutions that includes both Fordham and New York Universities.

Draw from related course offerings in the Philosophy, Comparative Literature, and History programs, as well as The Graduate Center’s certificate programs in Medieval Studies and Renaissance Studies.

Discover CUNY’s Latin and Greek Institute, which offers intensive, total-immersion programs in ancient languages during the summer.
