Job Market Meeting

18 June 2019
You are getting near the end ...

After 20 years in school ...

... you are reaching the highest point that can be reached.
... you are reaching the peak of the highest mountain.

... so, what is next?

The Job Market
What is the “Job Market” in Economics?

• A matching process that places PhD economists in jobs.
  – Especially important for soon-to-be economists
  – Driven by the academic calendar

• Unlike some other fields, in economics the matching of soon-to-be Ph.D.’s takes place on a relatively strict schedule in the U.S.

• “Nearly all” U.S. positions are advertised in the JOE (Job Openings for Economists), as are some foreign positions.

More true for academics (and gov’t) than for private sector
Jobs in the JOE

Percent of Job Listings

- US full-time academic: 40.9%
- US other academic (adjunct, visiting, temporary): 1.9%
- International full-time academic: 23.8%
- International other academic: 21.7%
- Full-time nonacademic: 3.0%
- Other nonacademic: 8.7%

Job Count/Composition & Seasonality

Note: Dec 2013 is technically missing; Dec 2012 is substituted.

• “The number of job openings for economics Ph.D.s fell by 4.3 percent from 2012 to 2013, according to new data from the American Economic Association.”

• “Like many academic disciplines, economics saw a sharp decline in openings after the recession hit in 2008. Openings dropped 21 percent the next year. Since then, positions have been climbing back to their 2008 levels. Last year's total of 2,915 jobs was one higher than the 2,914 listed in 2008. But this year's total is 2,790.”

→ Discrepancy with the summary graphs from the JOE listings.
Jobs in the JOE

• “Many new economics Ph.D. earners pursue non-academic careers -- and the latest job figures suggest an increase in that path. The number of new academic jobs fell by 6.6 percent, to 1,924. The number of non-academic jobs increased by 1 percent, to 866.”

• The AEA listed 3051 jobs, an increase of 9.4% from the total in 2013. This is the first time in 14 years that the total has exceeded 3000 jobs. Last year’s total was 2790 jobs.

• Compare: for 2013-2014, there was a decline in jobs for foreign languages of 8.4%, a decline in jobs in history of 7%, and a decline in jobs in religion of 17.5%.

• Compare: faculty jobs in communications have doubled since 2009 and rose 12% in 2013, and jobs in sociology rose 3.9% in 2013.
Academic and (much of the) non-academic placement takes place at the same time.

Note: Dec 2013 is technically missing; Dec 2012 is substituted.
Facts about the Econ job market

• Academic and (much of the) non-academic placement takes place at the same time.

• JOE:
  – Most US academic positions are announced in the JOE.
  – Only some of the US nonacademic positions are announced in the JOE.
  – Foreign positions (academic and non-academic) tend to be the more prestigious of those in foreign locals.

• Placement is
  – Highly competitive
  – Fairly hierarchical: students are not often being placed at schools ranked higher than where they receive their Ph.D.
Facts about the Econ job market

• The number of fields listed in job announcements differs substantially across fields
Facts about the Econ job market

• But fortunately, many jobs list several fields.
• Thus, the percentage of jobs that list a given field is higher than the share of any given field in the total.

Are you ready on Oct 1?
Should you enter the job market?

• Are you ready on Oct 1?
• Discuss with your advisor now:
  – How is your progress?
  – What is needed for the job market paper?
  – Will the job market paper be ready?
  – Will the ideas for the rest of your dissertation be in place?
  – Will you have preliminary work completed for the rest of your dissertation?
• Review again with your advisor in September
• Your advisor needs to agree with you going on the market!
Should you enter the job market?

- Are you ready on Oct 1?
- Discuss with your partner / spouse / family now:
  - Explain your progress?
  - How long can they bear with you?
  - Are there financial and time constraints?
  - Are there constraints on the job search?
    - Location!?
    - New York is not the only city in the world.
    - The market for economists is nationwide / worldwide.
    - Joint labor supply!?
    - Is your partner / spouse ready to move? To search for a job?
    - Where are those jobs located?
Getting the job market paper ready

• Work, work, work on job market paper.
• Reread, rewrite, polish.... Repeat!
• No typos! No grammar errors!
• Get comments! Often!
  – Get comments from your advisor on successive drafts.
  – Present in the student seminar.
  – Get comments from people outside your own group.
• As soon as possible, schedule a job market paper presentation in the Fall Applied Economics seminar.
  – The schedule will fill up very soon. Some or most slots may already be taken as of now.
Non-academic job market

• True or False: “If I go to the non-academic job market, I don’t really need a job market paper.”

• True or False: “If I go to the non-academic job market, I can wait with my job search until I defend my dissertation because once I get hired I need to start soon afterwards, not at the beginning of the next academic year.”

• True or False: “If I go to the non-academic job market, I only need a job market paper: no syllabi, no teaching philosophy statement, no research statement.”
Preparation

• What else is there to prepare?
  – Website
    • sites.google.com (or somewhere off campus)
    • At CUNY-GC (but this will disappear after you graduate)
  – Dissertation proposal
    • Before you send out the first application letter!!!
    • Avoid putting the cart before the horse.
      – The dissertation committee is there to help you, so why write your dissertation (or even only your job market paper) before you defend your dissertation proposal.
    • Going on the market before you pass your dissertation proposal makes you look unserious.
  – Line up your references.
About the letters of recommendation

• Dissertation advisor
• Other members of dissertation committee
• Teaching references

• Reference letters are very important.
  – Letters from well-known professors carry more weight than those from less well-known professors.
  – Letters from professors outside your field carry less weight than those from inside your field.

• Typical letters will outline your research and discuss its potential importance. They also will discuss teaching, etc., if the referee knows about it.

• Writing letters needs time. Give references advance notice.
One more thought...

• Take responsibility of your job search.

  – The world isn’t looking for you. You need to look for the right opportunity ... for any opportunity.

  – It is your future. → You search & You decide.

  – Don’t expect anybody to hold your hand and lead you to a job.

  – Job search is as demanding as teaching a new course (or two). But the only one who can do this work for you is the person in the mirror.

  – Other can help you, but only help you.

• Scary? We’ve all gone through it.
