Alumni News

Andréa Becker (‘22)
- Won the 2022 Roberta G. Simmons Outstanding Dissertation Award (medical sociology section)
- Published an op-ed article “Men Benefit From Abortion, Why Do We Mostly Study Women?” in New York Times

Emily Campbell (‘20)
Published an article titled “OxyContin created the opioid crisis, but stigma and prohibition have fueled it” in The Conversation. She was also interviewed by Worcester Magazine for her research on the opioid crisis.

Grace Cho (‘05)
Give a book talk on her memoir Tastes Like War (2021 National Book Award finalist) with Patricia Clough (faculty) hosted by GC Public Programs, which was also featured in GC News

Brenda Gambol (‘20) and Rebecca Taram (‘20)
Led their expertise in immigration policy as part of the 2022 IMISCOE (International Migration Research Network) annual conference

Heather Gautney (‘07)
Published a new book “The New Power Elite” (Oxford University Press, December 2022)

Angelique Harris (‘07)
Served as the new ad interim associate dean for diversity and inclusion at Boston University School of Medicine

Colin Jerolmack (‘09)
- Received honorable mention in 2022 ASA Allan Schnaiberg Outstanding Publication Award (Environmental Sociology Section) for his book Up to Heaven and Down to Hell (Princeton Press, 2021)
- Was featured in the cover story on GC website “Before You Protest Fracking in Rural Towns, You Might Want to Find Out How Your Apartment Is Heated

Tania G. Levey (‘06)
Published a book chapter "#MeToo and Social Media" in Institutional Sexual Abuse in the #MeToo Era edited by Jason D. Spraitz & Kendra Bowen (Southern Illinois University Press, 2021)

Mitchell Alan Kaplan (‘87)

Rebecca Karam (‘20)
Accepted a tenure-track assistant professor offer at Michigan State University
Chris Maggio (’21)
Co-published an article titled “Democratic change and assimilation in the early 21st-century United States” with Richard Alba (faculty emeritus) in PNAS, March 2022

Demond Mullins (’13)
Was interviewed in the PBS NewsHour “Mountaineer group aims to become first all-Black team to climb Everest”. His story was also featured on GC website “Alumnus Demond Mullins to lead first all-Black team to climb Everest”.

Amalia Leguizamón (’14)

- 2022 ASA Allan Schnaiberg Outstanding Publication Award (Environmental Sociology Section)
- 2022 ISA (International Studies Association) Global Development Section Book Award

Andrew Wallace (’15)
Was appointed as Director of Institutional Research at Hunter College

Tsedale Melaku (’16)
Began her new role as an assistant professor of management at Baruch College. Her interview was also featured in GC News “She Brings a Sociology Lens to Baruch Business Faculty.”

Karen Okigbo (’21)
Was featured in the 2022 GC Dissertation Showcase and received the Audience Choice Award

Chris Rosa (’2001)
Was appointed as the President and CEO of the Viscardi Center at the Graduate Center of CUNY, effective January 1, 2022. Chris also received the President’s Medal at Queens College.

Siqi Tu (’20)
- Wrote a piece “Shanghai Residents Ask: Should I Stay or Should I Go?” in Sixth Tone

Anna Zhelnina (’20)
Was featured in the International Horizons podcast “Propaganda, Protest and Repression in Russia” with John Torpey (faculty), which was also covered in GC News